

Interior Design Internship Program

A2SO4's summer internship program provides exceptional architecture and interior design students with opportunities to gain professional experience at our headquarters in Indianapolis.

In 2010, A2SO4 will be offering two internship positions — one for 3rd year or above architecture students and one for 3rd year interior design students. These internships will be a unique opportunity to blend the practical and the imaginative potential that both architecture and interior design offer. You will work with a talented team of dedicated and innovative staff, who have designed world-class projects.

INTERIOR DESIGN SUMMER INTERNSHIP PROGRAM OFFERS THREE MONTHS OF TRAINING FROM MID- MAY UNTIL MID-AUGUST

The Interiors Division of A2SO4 is pleased to offer one summer internship to a qualified 3rd year student of Interior Design. The internship will offer the opportunity to work alongside designers, architects and the founding principals of A2SO4. You will be challenged to stretch and improve your design skills, through working in the Design Development and Construction Document Phases of major client projects. As part of your training, you will be able to participate in client meetings and site visits.

One responsibility of the intern will be to update the A2SO4 product library as needed. This will increase your knowledge of materials, finishes, and specifications, as well as increase your familiarity with sustainable products. You will also have the opportunity to meet and network with area sales representatives as they bring new product offerings to the library.

The selected student will also have the opportunity to work directly with Wil Marquez at A2SX. An A2SO4 initiative, A2SX is a collaborative space exploring digital fabrication, research, and design.

A2SO4 realizes the importance of building relationships within the design community, and we will give you many opportunities to meet and network with other design professionals.
